Cook Patent Law Internship

In conjunction with the law school’s Center for Intellectual Property Research, Cook anticipates offering a number of part-time paid opportunities for students interested in patent law. Interns will work on ongoing projects involving strategic management of Cook’s patent portfolio, under the supervision of Cook patent attorneys and Cook’s outside patent counsel. Interns will work onsite at Cook, and will interact with Cook product managers and engineers. The internships provide an outstanding opportunity to explore the legal and business considerations underlying patent strategy at a major technology company.

All candidates must meet the standards for admission to the USPTO as a Patent Agent although current status as a Patent Agent is NOT required. The externships are open to current L2 and L3 students.

Cook is accepting applications for the spring 2016 semester.

*International students are welcome to apply for this position. Hiring decisions will be made by externship hosts.
